

Art of glass

Irish artist Olga Fitzpatrick launches her latest exhibition on Friday at Dublin's Blue Leaf Gallery. Taking a more abstract approach, the Rathmines-based artist combines porcelain with glass to create wall-mounted pieces. The pain-staking process means each piece takes three weeks to create. Fitzpatrick's unique style and method, the only one of its kind in the country, has seen her work snapped up by collectors both here and in the US. An artist and exhibition not to be missed.
